Part 3 - Digging Deeper - What Do I Need To Know When I Talk With My Teenager About Sex?

Oral Sex is Still Sex<sup>1</sup>

This week junior and senior high students attended an evening called, "No Apologies." The event focused on abstinence before marriage. I applaud the event! Unfortunately, there are many young adults who think saving themselves for marriage means avoiding one final act, not absolute purity.

The September 16, 2005 issue of the Washington Post had an article entitled Half of all teens have Had Oral Sex. The article quotes a government study that shows slightly more than half of American teenagers ages 15 to 19 have engaged in oral sex. The proportion increases to about 70% of 18 and 19 year olds. Today, teenagers just don't see oral sex as sex. As adults, it is our job to teach our kids the blessings of absolute purity for their wedding night. It is not our job to pretend our children don't have sexual desires. It is our job to cast a vision for joy of keeping them for the proper place and time.

Living Together is Bad Preparation for Marriage<sup>2</sup>

Young adults consider living together a good way to practice for marriage and test their compatibility.

Statistically between 1960 to 2010 the couples living together in the U.S. rose from 439,000 to five million. 10% of couples lived together before marriage in 1960, today it is 50%. A quarter of unmarried women ages 25 to 39 are presently living with a man to whom they are not married. Half of all women will live with a man before marriage. What are the results?

- You have a higher divorce rate if you live together before you are married (67% vs. 45%)
- A woman who lives with a man before marriage is 3 times more likely to suffer from depression.
- She is twice as likely to be beaten.
- She is nine times more likely to be murdered.
- Virgins who marry have a high level of marital satisfaction.
- Of 100 cohabitating couples, 85 break up before 10 years together.
- Men and women who live together are more likely to cheat on one another.

Remember, absolute purity for your wedding night is a choice for more joy, not for less.
